ANNUAL REPORT /2020/
CHANGE IS CONSTANT. AND LEARNING FROM THAT CHANGE HAS ALLOWED US TO GROW AND DEEPEN OUR CONNECTION TO OUR COMMUNITY. THE WAY FORWARD IS TOGETHER.

2020 has tested us. It has been a year that has separated us physically but brought us together in our determination to tackle difficult situations, and made us realize anew the importance of collective action. At AllTogether, we have adapted our programs to the changing needs of our community, and found creative ways to deepen our engagement and strengthen our ties across the Bay Area.
We have examined the values that shape our organization: community, creativity, growth and support, and renewed our goals to live up to these ideals.
As we grow, it is imperative to keep at the forefront the reason we are doing this—to build a more compassionate society where refugees and immigrants can flourish.
And so, our Annual Report this year is split into four sections, each highlighting activities based on different values we hold dear. Where we can, we have shared stories and quotes from participants, artists, teachers, and volunteers; the people that give this endeavour purpose and joy.
In a few days, 2020 will end. None of us could have predicted the magnitude of events we have faced this year. We experienced fear, pain, loss, anger, and the unknown. We also found new ways to connect and celebrate the small things in life. We learned how to keep our hope alive even when the light at the end of the tunnel seemed unreachable. Our members became our role models and, once again, we learned to respect the collective wisdom of our community.

ARTOgether started 2020 with a bold plan, clear program goals and ambitious growth predictions. The first two months were great. We celebrated the opening of our biggest public exhibitions yet on March 6th, an event attended by more than 200 people, and we were preparing to launch our third after-school art class when California began its first lockdown.

It didn’t take long for us to understand the devastating effects of this pandemic on our community of immigrants and refugees. We immediately initiated a relief fund for artists and moved many of our programs online to stay connected with those who felt isolated and scared. Yet again, we found art to be a necessity in times of trauma and uncertainty.

Like many other small, young organizations, we faced hardship this year. We were not able to secure government support and some of our grant makers shifted their priorities. But despite these challenges, ARTOgether has continued to grow. We added to our paid staff, welcomed three new board members, and started building a coalition with new communities. This report is a summary of what our team has accomplished.

Back in March, one of our community members, a genocide survivor, remarked that refugee communities, those who survived wars, torture, famine, and genocides, would overcome the pandemic. I smiled, but I didn’t see the relevance of his words. Here we are dealing with an unknown contagious disease, I thought. But now, nine months into the pandemic, I finally understand what he meant. Our community is not immune to disease, but we know kindness and care will carry us through.

I am humbled and grateful to learn from our resilient community. This year has made us even more determined to pursue our mission of creating opportunities for refugee and immigrant communities to flourish. Thank you for your trust and support.

With Gratitude,

Leva Zand

First came the art. As a way to get people in the same room, and talking, and sharing. Even when they didn’t speak the same language. Even when they had no artistic background or formal learning. Just as art has value in and of itself, so does the act of creating art. Whether as a way to acquire a new skill, make something personalized for a friend, a family member or yourself, a means of self-expression, or even just a way to stay busy while swapping stories, the value of creating art is unbound by age and expertise. The following ARTOgether events are ones that put creativity at the forefront, creating a space for new talents to be seen and new voices to be heard.

Born to Khmer refugees, Prumsodun Ok rose from the poverty-stricken inner city of Long Beach to become the new face of Khmer dance. He uses art to heal, illuminate, and empower, reviving the spirit of his people from the enduring forces of conflict. Seen by many as a champion of Khmer culture, he works as an artist, teacher, and writer to shape a world where everyone can blossom into their fullest selves.

Reflecting his realities as a Khmer American—as someone born in, of, and between many different cultures, communities, and worldviews—Ok draws upon many different languages and disciplines to reflect and shape the world around him. His training in experimental filmmaking, photography, poetry, and sound expand his expressive capacities and accentuate the singular nature of his visions, which are grounded in rich personal experience and conceptualized with a deep curiosity of history, ethnology, mythology, and religion. Ok strives to create work that is fearlessly honest, local in character and global in significance.

As the child of Khmer refugees who survived a genocide, having grown up surrounded by narratives of loss and brokenness, for me, creation is a protest against a legacy of violence and trauma. Creation is an act of healing that forges new paths and possibilities, for our individual selves, our communities, our traditions—and for survival itself.

A DEEPEST BLUE

Drawing upon a founding myth common to Cambodia and Japan, A Deepest Blue dives into the primordial depths of the ocean.

In the next two years and in partnership with ARTtogether and the Center for Empowering Refugees and Immigrants (CERI), Cambodian-American artist and cultural activist Prumsodun Ok will design, develop and perform A Deepest Blue. Bringing together artistic and spiritual traditions that are more than 1,000 years old, the project will feature the art form of Khmer classical dance alongside Japanese gagaku music and 3D holographic imagery.

The project was selected as one of 10 recipients of 2020’s Hewlett 50 Arts Commissions grant, receiving $150,000 in funding that will help make this ambitious new project a reality.
In collaboration with the Oakland Asian Cultural Center and GAMA (Gathering All Muslim Artists), ARTTogether curated Reflections on Home exhibition which featured the work of 18 female-identifying artists of color living in the Bay Area. Through photography, calligraphy, origami, painting, and mixed media, each artist explored the themes of "home" and "belonging," themes selected for their resonance with many in our refugee and immigrant communities.

Participating Artists

Opening Reception, March 2020, Oakland
From Killing Fields to Sanctuary is a multimedia short documentary project that will combine recorded interviews, photography, online resources, documentary film and community dialogues to tell the story of Cambodian refugees as part of California’s cultural fabric.

Directed by Ido Bartana and Nadim Badiee, with support from California Humanities, the documentary will center around Kanley Souet-Pich and her family, following their journey after the arrest and detention of Kanley’s husband by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, better known as ICE.

Currently being filmed, the project has evolved with the changing conditions of the pandemic, allowing us to follow the lives of our film’s protagonists during COVID-19 and the social unrest of the Black Lives Matter protests this summer.

“I don’t see an end to these [social justice campaigns]. There’s no telling when ICE will stop. There’s no telling when any of this cycle will stop... If we don’t keep going, we will keep living in this cycle.”

—Kanley Souet-Pich

FROM KILLING FIELDS TO SANCTUARY
“Rupture, even though it’s difficult, can be a catalyst for a new kind of imagination. We need to imagine before we can act.”

—Ranu Mukherjee, Workshop Facilitator
“This workshop really enabled me to look at my role in society, not only to look at it in the here and now, but how it relates to my ancestors, and the future.”

—Samia Karimi, Participating Artist

An in-person, socially-distant story-building workshop for refugee and immigrant artists, designed to open up space for artists to share their stories and collaborate. Together, artists learn how to express their artistic experiences and desires through writing, movement and visual art, grounded in a safe and experimental environment to explore and generate new ideas.

The Imagining the Future Workshop was facilitated by choreographer Hope Mohr and visual artist Ranu Mukherjee, in partnership with Hope Mohr Dance.

“Haemul Pajeon is one of my favorites on evenings when I don’t want to cook a full meal but I want something yummy, and especially, and especially in cold, rainy weather. Koreans think that the noise of the sizzling Pajeon or any type of pancake in oil resembles raindrops, so when it’s raining, and it’s cold, they think of eating Pajeon.”

To get our youngest members excited about drawing, painting and film while at home, ARTTogether has been hosting a monthly art contest for children and young adults aged 5–17. Students are delivered art supplies for free on request, and all participants receive a prize for sending in their entries, with a new theme each month to inspire their art.

“What I like about the ARTTogether [drawing contest] is that you can express your emotions and people can get to know you better with your drawings.”

—Zohra Bibi, Contest Artist, 8 years old
OUT OF THIS WORLD/
September Submission by Patricia Ordonez
At the core of ARTTogether’s work is the belief that having a community, having people to share one’s life and stories with, is central to healing. Even as our interactions turn virtual, we have strived to create spaces that nurture open dialogue and conversation. Spaces to laugh and relax, and let go. But also spaces to have complex, sometimes difficult conversations. When protests broke out after the murder of George Floyd, our weekly Afghan Women’s Craft Circle became a safe hub to talk about race, and the myths and rumors surrounding the protestors. These conversations have led to others—about issues that plague refugee, Native American and African-American communities disproportionately: displacement, poverty, lack of access, and environmental inequity.

In this section, we are featuring events and activities where building a strong collective and showcasing the stories of our community is the primary focus.

Juliana Mendonca is a Venezuelan contemporary dance performer, choreographer and teacher specializing in contemporary dance, Latin dance, as well as yoga and body expression for children and adults. She graduated with a degree in dance from the University Institute of Caracas, Venezuela in 2005, and is also a certified Yoga instructor. She taught in the Performing Arts Department of the University of the Andes in Mérida, Venezuela from 2012-2015 and at the Traditional Dance Program of the National University for the Arts in 2008. In 2005, Juliana co-founded Raíz de Agua, a music and dance company, which is her principal artistic endeavor. Though she is primarily a solo artist, Juliana has worked in collaboration with other artists and companies such as “Ranko Ogura Dance”, at the “Combustible Residency 2019 with Mabel Malvidiezo”, and at a dance and painting project with artists Ella Noe and Benjamin Arizmendi. She is currently a choreographer and interpreter of the dance and technology project ‘Synthetic Nature’, directed by the Argentine artist Andres Concatti.

Juliana teaches yoga and dance to children at a number of preschools in the San Francisco Bay Area, and is a Latin Rhythms teacher at a number of studios. She is also working on “Liquidanza”, a solo contemporary dance project taking place in water. Juliana is currently based in Oakland, California and is one of ARTgether’s affiliated artists.

I love the opportunity to meet new artists, and be in spaces with people I don’t normally engage with. I joined because I wanted to engage with artists whose identity and work are closely tied, I stayed because building an art community is really important for me and my continued development as an artist.

—Paola de la Calle, Artist Meet-Up Participant

ARTIST MEET-UP

During the pandemic, many artists have lost income, as well as the public spaces where they can present their art. But just as important, they’ve lost their community, and the creativity and support that comes from artistic collaboration and exchange.

The Artist Meet-Up is our attempt to meet these needs. An intimate, monthly Zoom meet-up for refugee and immigrant artists living in the Bay Area, each Meet-Up offers a safe space for artists to share ideas and challenges, with lively discussions, artistic showcases and even a live performance or two.

Our version of Valentine’s Day wasn’t about candy hearts and roses. But it was special. It was a day for families and friends to take some time off from their busy schedules, and while their children were at daycare, let loose and dance the night away.

ARTOgether offered this special date-night workshop in collaboration with the Cesar Chavez Center & The Unity Council in Concord, CA.

“I wanted to say a big thank you for your support and awesome Valentine’s celebration! The families that came were the ones that have been on our priority list for needing extra emotional support services, so thank you for allowing them to reconnect and have a night off!”

—Jacqueline Smith, Family and Community Partnerships Coordinator, The Unity Council
ARTtogether’s booth at the Mid-Autumn Moon Festival in Oakland featured live mural painting for children and adults, led by Oakland-based queer artist Sen Mendez, known throughout the Bay Area as Queen Sen Sen. Organized by the Vietnamese Chamber of Commerce, the festivities are a way for children and families to celebrate the harvest moon together and with their community.

Our community quilt-making project brought children and adults together to create beautiful pieces of quilted art together. Led by artist Polina Marso and held at the Contemporary Jewish Museum, the workshop brought together members of the community for an afternoon of joyful creativity and celebration.
A free watercolor workshop series for refugees, immigrants and their allies. Offered in collaboration with StoryCenter, these Zoom workshops are a creative space for the communities of refugees, immigrants and allies to paint, chat, listen to music (we have a DJ!) and share stories.

“I am drawing and painting my mom tonight. I recalled a memory of being a child in Hong Kong with my mom. We were refugees and I was five. I remember the dress she is wearing in this picture [that I’m painting]. It was a traditional Chinese dress, a qipao, which she had many beautiful dresses of. She passed away young. But 40 years later after my dad passed, we discovered that he had kept them all.”

together’s longest-running workshop series, the Women’s Craft Circle creates a welcoming space for women to make crafts, share stories, listen to music, and sometimes even dance! For the last three years, the workshop has been held at the Center for Empowering Refugees and Immigrants (CERI), and since the pandemic has been expanded and offered online to a group of Afghan ladies in Oakland from Refugee and Immigrant Transitions (RIT).

During the harshest months of the pandemic, the Women’s Craft Circle made and distributed hundreds of masks throughout the San Francisco Bay Area, working alongside ARTgether and RIT with support from the Center for Craft.

“I am looking forward to this class every Friday. Talking to my friends and doing hand crafts is comforting... [The Circle] gives us a space to talk and enjoy doing art together.”

—Workshop Participant
Change is constant. And this year has been all about change. And though that change is hard, our ability to adapt and grow in these times has determined where we are today. This section highlights examples of our existing programs, remodeled to suit the current situation, and new programs, borne out of our unprecedented times.

Several years ago I was trying to start a scholarship program in Oakland for those who wanted to study music but couldn’t afford it. When I met Leva and learned about ARTTogether, I saw that as an opportunity to bring that idea to fruition. We originally launched “Music Studio” as an after-school class at Oakland International High School. Our first semester we had 7 students in the class, and that grew to around 20 in the second semester. Then Covid landed on us and everything was put on hold. We tried re-launching the class as an online offering, but that wasn’t working out. So we decided to revert to my original idea of offering a scholarship to an individual who was truly interested in making music. We found that student in JiaYing.

JiaYing was already registered for the previous semester of “Music Studio” and demonstrated all the right characteristics. She was curious, passionate, engaged and always followed through. I was impressed by her from the start. Especially considering she was a recent immigrant from China, and the language barrier was significant. When I offered her the scholarship, she was very excited and immediately accepted.

JiaYing and I have been working together on several tracks simultaneously. We started learning Pro Tools software, exploring the various elements to modern music production - live audio, MIDI, loops and samples, and more. In addition to the technology component, we are also delving into music theory - melody, harmony, rhythm, scales, etc. We’ve been working together one-on-one and I’m very excited. I expect greatness from JiaYing!

Indigenous tribes, the names they had for their communities—Lakota, Cherokee, Sioux—even though they’re in different languages, all translate to “the people”. Indigenous folks remember, that we are “the people” first. We’re trapped in this Western culture of capitalism and individualism, and we know that they want to keep us divided. They sow dissent in our movements, because they know we’re stronger together. And divided, we don’t stand a chance.

— Rhatura Bowden, Artist and Activist

INTERSECTING INDIGENOUS, BLACK AND REFUGEE LIVES

A series of panel discussions revolving around race, immigration, and coalition-building. Inspired by the Black Lives Matter protests following the murder of George Floyd, our aim with these conversations is to understand the complex issues involved in building meaningful coalitions between communities of color and to find a path forward for creating a more just, equitable future.
“Thank you so much for organizing the workshop! It was super helpful and I’m a smidge less intimidated and now more motivated to forge forth.”

—Midori, Workshop Participant

GRANT-WRITING WORKSHOP

To help artists navigate the process of grant-writing, ARTOGETHER organized a free, online workshop for Bay Area artists of color, exploring the different stages of writing a successful grant.
Our children’s art camps have been a mainstay of ARTogether’s programming since its first year. This summer our art camp offered online to children aged 7-10 and 11-14 and we added an exciting winter camp to bring excitement, fun and creativity to the holiday season.

Both camp events were offered in partnership with the Center for Empowering Refugees and Immigrants in Oakland.

“I absolutely loved being a counselor over the past week at ARTogether and CERI’s art camp. Everyone was so engaged with the camp and all of the activities... We were all able to participate not only in interesting and varied art activities, but many of the kids took some of the activities a step further and were incredibly vulnerable in sharing past and present personal life experiences and perspectives. This openness allowed a much stronger community to be formed, and created an environment in which everyone felt comfortable sharing more of themselves.”

—Avrah Ross, Camp Teacher
Since 2019, ARTogether has organized after-school art classes for Oakland International High School, tweaking and developing new programs based on the interests and needs of the students. The program began with classes in Music Studio Production and Creative Storytelling, adding additional classes each semester. This year, as all learning moved online, we changed the style and structure of our classes, offering classes such as Painting and Digital Photography that work well in an online format.

As the program has evolved to meet this unpredictability, our arts program has benefited tremendously from the support of partners such as the Morris Stulsaft Foundation, the Mockingbird Foundation, the California Arts Council, and the inspiring teachers and staff of Oakland International High School.

The loss of artists’ income during the pandemic was not only severe, but painfully sudden. To help generate income for refugee and immigrant artists, ARTTogether has launched an online art shop to sell original paintings, photography, and digital prints by Bay Area artists. Though still in its early stages, the Etsy store already features the works of three artists, as well as chic ARTTogether merchandise.
Support comes in many forms—financial, logistical, emotional. A majority of ARTogther’s programs promote community-building and collective action. But these communities are made up of individuals, who often need individualized support. The programs in this section have filled a need for our artists on a more one-on-one basis, many of whom have faced a particularly long and difficult read this year.

Somaieh Amini is a visual designer and illustrator based in San Jose, California. Somaieh was born in 1981, spent her childhood and adolescence in Isfahan, Iran, and earned her B.A. in Painting at the University of Al-Zahra in Tehran. Between 2001 and 2007, she worked with multiple animation companies as a Concept, Background, and Layout Artist, and worked for television shows and movies as a Matte Painter. In 2009 Somaieh left her life in Iran to move to Rome, Italy, continuing her studies to earn an M.A. in Painting at the Accademia di Belle Arti di Roma. In 2012, Somaieh moved again to the United States, a second relocation that took an emotional toll that impacted her art. Since her relocation, Somaieh has dedicated her artistic career to painting and illustration. Somaieh currently works as a visual designer and illustrator, winning ARTTogether’s Mini-Grant for Artists in 2020.

I am not alone in this world! I also want to help people. All is well with your care and help— I am painting and full of optimism!

EMERGENCY RELIEF FUND FOR ARTISTS

Following shelter-in-place, many artists feared losing their main source of income. For refugee and immigrant artists, many were not able to accept any government support whatsoever, fearing it could endanger their green cards or citizenship applications.

In response, ARTTogether launched the Emergency Relief Fund for Artists, providing essential financial support to refugee and immigrant artists to pay their rent and utilities. This accompanied a public campaign, urging institutions and individuals to honor their existing contracts with artists. With support from the San Francisco Foundation, The Global Whole Being Fund and the East Bay Community Foundation, our efforts have grown to provide broader support to refugee and immigrant artists, forming lasting connections that we have built on to offer more lasting support to artists in our community.
To help artists find funding, ARTgether has offered grant-writing support and grant partnerships to artists, support which has become more essential as other sources of art-based income have dried up. This year, ARTgether worked with individual artists on grant applications, helping them to develop and outline their projects, and providing organizational support and resources to strengthen their applications.

“I am very grateful for all the support and energy put into this grant. I love the contribution of your ideas and the writing of the proposal... I am very happy and excited about this collaboration. Congratulations to the entire ARTgether team for the wonderful work you are doing in these strange and new times. It has been a great motivation and inspiration for me.”

— Juliana Mendonca, Dancer, Choreographer and Teacher

GRANT-WRITING SUPPORT

To help artists find funding, ARTgether has offered grant-writing support and grant partnerships to artists, support which has become more essential as other sources of art-based income have dried up. This year, ARTgether worked with individual artists on grant applications, helping them to develop and outline their projects, and providing organizational support and resources to strengthen their applications.
Our monthly mini-grants for artists are awarded to upcoming Bay Area immigrant and refugee artists, helping them to complete major art projects. Each grant awards $500 for work on a specific project, and can be used for art supplies, equipment, costumes or to pay for editing or similar professional expenses.

MINI-GRANTS FOR ARTISTS

“Press Play is an award-winning webcomic that seeks to promote mental health awareness, and advocate for the practice of creative play and holistic well-being to combat mental health struggles. I’m truly grateful for ARTtogether’s support in continuing our effort to reach different communities where mental health awareness and information are lacking. Originally in English, the project had been translated into Chinese (traditional and simplified). Upon receiving the mini-grant, we completed additional translations into Bahasa Indonesia and Thai. And a Spanish translation will be released in 2021.”

—Edward Gunawan, Digital Storyteller and Winner of the First Mini-Grant
Khamsa is a visual and musical journey through the five stages of grief, encouraging the audience to explore different aspects of trauma’s universality. A collaborative creation led by Muslim artist, community organizer and activist Guled Muse in partnership with ARTogether, Khamsa will be a multimedia installation with five separate rooms, each addressing a different stage of the grieving process: denial, anger, bargaining, depression and acceptance. Collaborating artists will include musicians and visual artists of color from across the United States. The vision of Khamsa is to spark new narratives around grief and trauma, using different media and disciplines to present new perspectives on mental health.

Khamsa is the latest of ARTogether’s collaborative art projects, partnering with refugee, immigrant and BIPOC artists to fund and create new artistic efforts.
The Pandemic did not stop ARTgether’s organizational growth. This year, we have added three members to our Board of Directors, developed our Strategy Plan, developed a system for donor management and engagement, significantly improved our measurement and evaluation system for member feedback, launched our first official fundraising drive, finalized our insurance policies, and developed and launched our new website.
Dear Friends,

When I joined the board of ARTogether back in January, I was excited at the opportunity to put my professional corporate background to use towards growing this wonderful grassroots organization. Little did I know that 2020 would become such a constant learning experience on embracing change instead.

Throughout the year, I have been constantly inspired by the leadership of our Executive Director, and the determination of our staff, volunteers, and board members. Our community has been hit hard by the effects of the Covid pandemic, both emotionally and economically. But in the midst of uncertainty, we looked inward. We acknowledged that, even though we can not foresee what the future will bring, we can seek guidance in our mission and in the strength and wisdom of our communities.

This year was also a time of reckoning for all of us. As continued and intolerable police violence against Black individuals and communities culminated in the Black Lives Matter protests, we reflected on our role in the fight for social justice and the importance of speaking out and taking action. This fall, we launched the Black and Refugee Coalition-Building Project to foster an intersectional conversation about community engagement and the role of art in building solidarity and unity, a first step in an ongoing journey towards collective action, learning, and building equity.

When I look back at all we did this year, I can’t help but feel both deeply grateful and hopeful for our future as an organization. We listened to our community, shared our struggles, and grew to become better allies to each other.

With hope and gratitude,

Celeste Tretto
Chair of the Board

When I look back at all we did this year, I can’t help but feel both deeply grateful and hopeful for our future as an organization. We listened to our community, shared our struggles, and grew to become better allies to each other.

While 2021 may have more unpredictability in store, ARTTogether has developed a number of programs we plan to launch during the upcoming year.

- Our new Artist Mentorship Program, pairing emerging BIPOC artists with seasoned artists, while providing group support in marketing, best practices, research, grant-writing and more.
- Expansion of ARTTogether’s arts program at Oakland International High School, launching our new Occupational Therapy Program for students experiencing depression and difficult mental health issues.
- The debut of our short documentary From Killing Fields to Sanctuary, to be launched alongside the project’s gallery exhibition, panel discussions, and (pandemic-permitting) community events.
- A new community mural painted in Oakland, with developing plans at the Vietnamese American Community Center of the East Bay (VACCEB) in Clinton Park.
- The launch of the Muslim Women’s Support Group, a new project which will provide an unfiltered, unapologetic, safe, and confidential environment for Muslim women to discuss mental health issues as they create art together.
